

The author displays a reverent handling of the text throughout the work along with a conservative approach with minimal changes of the text of Ezekiel. He has a good acquaintance with the relevant literature. The work manifests a splendid and ample use of parallel passages in both testaments, especially the Old Testament. Vice-Principal Taylor has placed us all in his debt with this serious consideration to the understanding of the prophecy of Ezekiel.

— ANNOUNCEMENT —

24th ANNUAL MEETING

DECEMBER 27-29, 1972

Bethel College, St. Paul, Minnesota

GOD AND LANGUAGE, speaking meaningfully about God to a secular age, will be the central theme before the members of the society as it meets in its 24th annual meeting.

BETHEL COLLEGE'S new campus will host the members and guests, providing lodging, meals, and transportation to and from the Minneapolis airport for a total fee of $25. Registration will open on Wednesday, December 27 at 2 p.m.

PAPERS ON THE THEME will receive priority in the planning of the program, but sessions will be scheduled for open topics as well.

GUEST SPEAKERS from the fields of linguistics, anthropology and philosophy will strengthen the dialogue and discussions on the communication of Biblical and theological truth to contemporary man.

For information concerning participation in or attending these sessions write to:

Arthur H. Lewis
Bethel College
1480 North Snelling Ave.
St. Paul, Minnesota 55105
